Subject of the trail Desert cycling	Season Winter, Fall, Spring	Total climbing 820	Difficulty Intermediate	Length 55	Ending point Mitspe Ramon	Starting point Midreshet Ben-Gurion

Information

This segment, which begins at Midreshet Ben-Gurion and ends at Mitspe Ramon, is about 55 km long. Most of it was created with the assistance of Israel Bike Trail volunteers. The segment takes in breathtaking desert landscapes, World Heritage Sites, ancient agriculture and a varied human mosaic.

The trail begins at Midreshet Ben-Gurion, an environmental community, a center for environmental and desert studies and a focus of desert tourism. It climbs gradually toward Mitspe Ramon, at a height of 850 m above sea level, through the landscapes of Wadi Tsin and the Tsin Valley and their unique marl badlands.

We recommend entering En Avdat National Park from the direction of En Ma'arif toward the lookout that reveals the impressive canyon and waterfall of Wadi Tsin and En Ma'arif.

After about 14 km, the trail reaches the foot of the dramatic ancient ruins of Avdat – a World Heritage Site. Later it crosses the untamed valleys of the Negev Highlands and passes remnants of ancient agriculture. The high point of the day's ride is at its end, with the stunning view of Makhtesh Ramon. Along the trail are opportunities to be hosted at a Bedouin community or sip fine wine at one of the farms.

Please notice the following:

- No water sources along the trail. 4 liters are the minimum you should carry.
- Scarce shade spots along the trail.
- Avoid riding in hot days! Hot days are frequent between May to late september. If you are planning to ride in that period of time, It is advised to start very early in the morning.
- Do not approach the edge of cliffs
- Please Stay on the trail!
